

It's time to Kill Your File Shares!

Corporate file shares pose one of the biggest information risks to an organization. From ROT (redundant, obsolete & trivial), to sensitive information (PII, PCI, PHI, etc.), much of the content hidden in these large unstructured repositories creates significant litigation, regulatory, and compliance risk. Getting control over or eliminating file shares altogether helps reduce risk and puts companies on the path to benefit from modern cloud content services solutions.

Active Navigation and Integro have partnered to offer a best-of-breed team to help you kill your file shares. By combining Active Navigation's market-leading file analysis software with Integro's award-winning services, our team will facilitate a cost effective, secure, and efficient approach to data cleanup.

As depicted in Integro's 5-step process, Content Analysis and Content Cleanup are crucial first steps to an information governance initiative and are supported by using a file analysis tool.

These two steps allow you to:

- design and act on policies driven by the value of your data
- locate and remediate files containing sensitive information
- plan content migration based on the value of your data

Put an end to the practice of storing data in random file shares scattered throughout the company and begin formulating an information governance initiative and remediation plan to kill your file shares with Active Navigation and Integro.

"File Analysis enables valuable insight for the organization by providing improved knowledge regarding the location and usage of unstructured data, which often accounts for nearly 80% of the data footprint for an organization."
